Executive Summary

The Washington Health Benefit Exchange (WAHBE) retained Wakely Consulting Group, LLC (Wakely) to develop standardized plan designs for plan year 2021 and to estimate the impact of introducing standardized plans on market premiums. Wakely's work involved evaluating recent (benefit years 2019 and 2020) individual plan offerings, measuring prevalence of benefit parameters, developing model standard plan designs for gold, silver and bronze plans, and estimating the premium impact of offering those model plan designs.

We designed one plan for the gold and silver metal tiers, two plans for the bronze metal tier, as well as plans for each silver cost-sharing variant (73%, 87%, and 94% actuarial values (AVs)). Wakely used an internal ACA pricing model for measuring the expected relative price difference between the current and model standard plans. The standard model allows a consistent basis to facilitate comparisons. We assumed that the standard silver plan would be the second-lowest cost silver plan in each county. We calibrated the Wakely ACA Pricing Model to utilization and service costs for the overall Washington individual ACA market.

Through this process, we estimated that enrollees in the current gold plans could see price changes ranging from a decrease of 3.4% to an increase of 8.1% by moving to the model standard plan from the existing plans. Those in silver plans could see price increases ranging from 2.0% to 7.2%. Those in bronze plans could see estimated price increases ranging from 0.2% to 3.7% by moving to the standard bronze plan, and changes ranging from decreases of 3.8% to 0.3% by moving to the standard bronze HSA plan from the existing plans. These rating impacts would directly affect unsubsidized enrollees. Subsidized enrollees would likely have their rate change offset by the change in the benchmark plan rate. These estimates reflect the estimated impact under the key assumptions outlined in this report. Different structures to standard plans and differences between pricing approaches between issuers are expected to result in pricing impacts different from what is shown in this report.

This paper includes the proposed standard plan designs, the analysis of the pricing impact, and key methods and assumptions used in the construction and analysis of the proposed standard plans.

Model Standard Plan Designs

After reviewing the prevalence of current plans and cost-sharing structures, Wakely worked with WAHBE to develop model standard plan designs for discussion with stakeholders and to be subject to public comment. We expect to refine the plan designs based on stakeholder feedback and the release of the 2021 Federal Actuarial Value Calculator. Initial plans were developed to appeal to a wide variety of consumers. To the extent possible, there was a goal of having some higher value services be not subject to deductible. There was also direction to model a higher actuarial value plan and a lower premium plan at the bronze level. The following chart presents the standard plan designs for the model gold, silver (non-CSR), and bronze plans.

Shaded values in the tables indicate cost sharing that is not subject to the deductible.

The model standard plan designs will likely need to be modified to be applicable for the 2021 benefit year and beyond in order to remain within the actuarial value requirements as defined by Federal Actuarial Value Calculator (AVC) models in effect for the appropriate benefit year.

The Appendix includes comparisons of the proposed standard plans alongside all current 2020 plans in the Washington market. The Appendix also includes how the standard plans have changed since the report from September 18, 2019.

CSR Plans

Wakely has also developed potential Cost Sharing Reduction (CSR) plans. Three CSR plans are required for each silver plan on the exchange. The AVs for each variation are targeted to be 73%, 87%, and 94% compared to a target of 70% for the standard silver. Although there are limits on the Maximum Out of Pocket amount (MOOP) for each CSR variation, there is significant leeway in which cost sharing items to reduce for each variation.

The following table shows the base silver plan with the three CSR variations so that readers can see the stepping down of various cost-sharing components.

For perspective, we provide the following examples of enrollees with incomes that would qualify for each level of CSR plan.

73% AV Variant (201%-250% FPL)

- Single individual, 234% FPL
- Annual income: $29,280
- Monthly income: $2,440

87% AV Variant (151%-200% FPL)

- Single individual, 192% FPL
- Annual income: $23,931
- Monthly income: $1,994

94% AV Variant (up to 150% FPL)

- Single individual, 106% FPL (ineligible for WA Apple Health due to immigration status)
- Annual income: $13,295
- Monthly income: $1,108

Pricing Impact

This section presents comparisons of the model standard plan designs for the gold, silver, and bronze plans and the plan designs for the current plans in Washington. We also estimated the impact to premiums and federal subsidies associated with offering these standard plans.

Because the Federal AVC is intended to only measure whether a plan meets the requirements for the metal levels, we did not use the resulting actuarial values to estimate pricing impact. To estimate the impact on premiums and federal subsidies, Wakely utilized our internal ACA individual pricing model. The model was calibrated to estimate utilization and service costs in the Washington individual market and to develop the pricing AVs for each of the model plans and comparison of 2020 plans. This allowed us to do a comparison of relative differences between pricing AVs of the plans. Finally, we applied the relative differences between pricing AVs to existing plans' premiums for Essential Health Benefits (EHBs) and adjusted for any plan-specific non-EHBs. We used this approach to develop premium estimates for the model standard plans that would reflect existing issuers' utilizations and costs of care. Our results should be considered estimates, as actual issuer premiums may be different from our modeling. For this report, we concentrated on Rating Area 1 for the estimates including dollar impact to premiums for those carriers that offer plans in Rating Area 1. For the three carriers that do not offer plans in Rating Area 1, we used plans available in Rating Area 3 for comparison.

To calibrate the Wakely ACA Pricing Model to include Washington-specific data to the extent publicly available, we used utilization and service information from Washington issuers' 2020 URRT submissions. We first grouped the service lines in our model into the URRT categories. Using the URRT data, considering any differences in unit definitions, we developed adjustments for both utilization rates and service cost levels. We then further adjusted the model to match the aggregate 2020 PMPM amounts by category.

Because we calibrated our model to approximate the entire network and not each specific issuer, the pricing models of specific issuers may result in varying pricing AVs.

The following table shows the pricing AVs for the standard gold plan and the current gold plans based on Wakely's pricing model. The difference in the pricing AVs approximates the pricing impact of replacing the current plan with the standard plan design. A specific issuer's pricing model will likely produce different pricing AVs than those produced by the Wakely model. This is due to many reasons including the fact that we calibrated our model to approximate the entire market and not each specific issuer. Our comparisons of AVs for current and model standard plans were developed using one consistent model for all plans to isolate the relative difference in price between plans. Actual premium impacts associated with plan design changes will be determined by an issuer’s pricing approach as well as the final standard plan designs required to meet the metal definitions.

Note that each issuer may have different pricing AVs for the similar plan design, which reflect the characteristics of that issuer’s provider network, medical management programs, etc. Our analysis of the pricing impact assumed that the relative difference in pricing AVs from the Wakely model is an indication of the anticipated relative difference in the premium.

Enrollees that do not have APTCs will see the full impact of any premium change. The following table shows the estimated premium impact for a 40-year-old in Rating Area 1, comparing 2020 rates for current plans with the model standard gold plan. Compared to the standard gold plan, the available plans would be expected to see decreases between 3.4% and an increase of 8.1%.

Advanced Premium Tax Credit (APTC) amounts are influenced by the second-lowest cost silver plan available in a specific area. The premium for the second-lowest cost silver plan will also be affected by the selection and pricing of the standard plans. An increase in the second-lowest cost silver plan premium will result in higher subsidies available for those eligible for subsidies, all things equal. For this analysis, we are assuming that the individual is in Rating Area 1 (King County) for which the current plan Ambetter Balanced Care 4 (2020) is the second-lowest silver plan. The tables reflect the impact of the model standard plan being the second-lowest cost silver plan and, therefore, the benchmark for determining APTC. The estimated change in premium shown for the plan changing to the standard silver plan in the Pricing Impact table for unsubsidized enrollees can be used as a proxy for the change in the APTC for eligible enrollees. The estimated change in premium for subsidized enrollees is shown in the following table. The change in the subsidy brings the premium change for each model silver plan much closer together. Most plans would see modest premium changes of 2.2% or less.

The analysis of silver plan pricing impact on subsidized enrollees was based on the standard silver plan being the second-lowest cost silver plan. Should additional silver plans be offered alongside the model standard silver plan and be priced lower than the standard plan, other plans could become the benchmark plan for purposes of calculating APTC, which would change the pricing impact for subsidized enrollees.

Assumptions

- We did not make any assumption that the plans will meet Mental Health Parity requirements for a specific carrier. We recommend that all carriers test for parity. Standard plan designs can then be revised to ensure all standard plans meet parity for all carriers.

For purposes of analyzing pricing implications

- Trend and PMPM Assumptions used in Pricing Model are from Washington Individual Market. We developed trend and PMPM assumptions for our internal ACA pricing model by reviewing rate filings for the state of Washington. This effectively calibrated Wakely's pricing model to reflect costs expected in the Washington individual market.
- This analysis assumes that any non-standard silver plan offered will have an equal or higher Federal AV than the standard silver plans, and that the second-lowest cost silver plan in all counties would be a standard silver plan. No silver plans would change the second-lowest cost silver plan.
- Our analysis uses the 2020 plan designs, 2020 rates, and the 2020 Federal AVC. Actual standard plan designs will have to be adjusted to fit the 2021 Federal AV requirements for metal levels. The pricing impact would also be different from what is reflected in this analysis.
- We assumed there is no change in current EHB requirements, or in the amount of non-EHBs offered in current plans.
- Relative difference in AV's from Wakely's pricing model are assumed representative of the relative change in carriers' pricing models.
